“ Where do you start when you want to cover more than half a lifetime? Steve was my first manager when I was hired at AMIG - American Modern Insurance Group in 1981. It was rough going for a while because Steve wouldn't elaborate much on anything. He was not a talker and I had just come from a computer sales position where I talked all day. I would get handwritten notes from Steve on what he needed me to do. After our first couple of projects, we had to collaborate on redesigning the IC (Insurance Casualty) System, so we had to brainstorm back and forth on what would work best for the company. We then started down the path of friendship and he shared with me his personal life as well as his business life. He is the person that encouraged me to take a cruise as a vacation. He had been on several with his wife and after I had watched Love Boat for all those years, I was ready to take his advice. It would take almost a decade before we could do our first cruise, but we were hooked. After the move to Amelia, we would have lunch together each day in the break room and joke and talk and share stories, and moan and groan about how things were doing at AMIG. I sent him a two word email when we found out from HR that they were offering an early retirement again in 2012: "Wish Granted". The sad thing about departing from AMIG was not having the daily interaction with my co-worker friends and most especially Steve. I had spent the majority of my working career there. I'm glad that Steve had a chance to enjoy at least some years of retirement and not worry about the day-to-day business nonsense. It was a goal that we had talked about often. I'm just sad that Steve didn't have lots more time to enjoy this hard-earned goal. Rest easy my dear friend, there are no hurdles now. Mike.
