“ Every single weekend, and 2 weeks in the summer I spent most of my time as a child and young teenager there with you Aunt Freda. I remember our morning coffee and chocolate chip cookies at the table. You in your chair and me at mine. Our afternoon sittings on the porch, reading our books and watching the birds. An often a few stories of how I reminded you so much of Mama as a kid. And then there was our evenings spent in the living room watching the most ridiculous detective shows. An as the years went by, I lost my way and forgotten how precious those moments truly meant, not just for you, but for me as well. I love you Aunt Freda, I hope you've finally found that paradise you longed for, for so long. True happiness.

*She died this morning
Peacefully in her sleep
When she crossed over to your side
Did you smile or did you weep?
We're your arms open wide
For a welcoming embrace?
Was her hair of raven locks
No lines upon her face?
Was she walking straight and tall
No limp in her gait at all?
Did you get a mischievous grin
As she asked you
Where you been?

And Freda was like a mom to all of us. Her and Grandma were always there helping every way they could. I love you Aunt Freda always will
