“ I had the pleasure of working alongside Everett during our professional careers. He had a unique intellect and mental capacity for some very specialized areas of knowledge. I learned more from Everett than he ever learned from me. He was always ready to help out a friend and I never tired of our conversations on long road trips and extended waits in airport terminals. When it came to negotiating your way around, though, and in very large American cities, Everett was the best. God bless and rest in peace, brother. Wayne Barte
